Data Center Infrastructure Management (DCIM) Administrator | Cloudflare

Cover letter

Hi Cloudflare team,

When I was on call at Front Range Internet, a server that needed work was a customer issue as much as a hardware issue. I ran NOC escalations, repaired aging servers that couldn't easily be replaced, and put together procedures for the people who would take the next call. The part of this opening that caught my eye was making the physical work and the record of that work agree.

I've loved making computers do useful things since I was a kid. It felt like magic then, and I still get that feeling when a tool makes a job easier for the next person. At FRII that meant diagnostics and written handoffs for the NOC. At Excell, through Technomancy IT, it meant working hands-on with servers, workstations and the network while helping bring a satellite office online.

I'd bring that same approach to Cloudflare's work orders, asset records and field procedures. My background is in infrastructure operations and datacenter work rather than administering Nlyte. I'd start by learning how your technicians receive, move and retire equipment, where the records can drift, and how to give the next person enough information to act.

Thanks,
